

The National Center for Safe Supportive Schools promotes well-being and equity for all school staff, students and families, by implementing comprehensive school mental health systems with policies and practices that are trauma-informed and culturally responsive

The National Center for Safe Support Schools (NCS3) Cultural Responsiveness, Anti-Racism and Equity (CARE) team is hosting a conversation to inform our national training and implementation efforts.

Facilitated by the NCS3 Cultural Responsiveness, Anti-Racism and Equity (CARE) Team

Tiffany Beason, PhD

Caryn Curry, LCSW

Meg Smith, MSW, LICSW, ACSW

Bianca Vargas-Ocasio, LSW

The National Center for Safe Supportive Schools promotes well-being and equity for all school staff, students, and families, by implementing comprehensive school mental health systems with policies and practices that are trauma-informed and culturally responsive.

We want to hear from YOU about important issues that will inform our work, including:

- What language best reflects our work?
- What policies and practices are necessary to support BIPOC and newcomer (refugee and immigrant) youth and families?
- What is the preferred balance of didactic, reflection, and application/action during trainings related to CARE?
- What resources exist to inform our work? What resources do not yet exist but could advance the work if developed?

After a brief overview of the NCS3, we will engage the audience via the Zoom chat feature in dialogue about these questions and more. Be a part of informing our national training and resources!